

Asilomar explores campus policies

Rick Oliver, ASDAC vice-president, presented student proposals at the Asilomar conference last weekend.

A total of 12 proposals were submitted by students and instructors for administration consideration at the Student-Faculty Retreat at Asilomar last weekend.

The four main proposals offered by the students covered a multi-cultural program, faculty evaluations, counseling and censorship.

The faculty representatives proposed that the present district policy on textbook selection be abolished, faculty hiring be done by an administration-student screening board, faculty representation on student council and student representation in the faculty senate, and repeal of the dress code.

THE GUEST SPEAKER at the conference, Edward Sampson, professor of psychology at the University of California at Berkeley, spoke about the relations between third-world people and members of the fourth world.

Sampson described third-world members as the Chicano, the Black, poverty-stricken people and anyone else who might fall into that general category. He labeled the first and second worlds as the Communist and Democratic societies.

A third-world revolution exists because the members are not receiving their share of the abounding affluence that exists in America, according to Sampson.

THE FOURTH world consists of people who are rich and white. Sampson emphasized the fact that members of the fourth world are victims of rationalized, bureaucratic lives.

In this line, students proposed a counseling program which would include a third-world member. Chris Cross, BSU co-chairman, said that a third-world member would be more effective with minority students because he would be able to understand the environment, personality and conditioning the third-world student has been facing all his life.

Another proposal at the conference concerned the ratio of third-world students on major campus boards. The proposal asked that the ratio be one-to-one with white students because the boards presently do not have proper student representation.

The multi-cultural program should include economics, sociology, anthropology and history, according to Cross. He would also like to see a course on racism and prejudice required for faculty, students and administrators.

"A major problem of the white people is a need to communicate. We want to understand the third-world people. We can learn why the black man acts, thinks and behaves the way he does. The white student could better understand his society of which the third world is a major part," added Pat Brown.

HOWEVER, CROSS thinks the white man is afraid to enter into communications with the people of multi-cultural programs because he doesn't want to take the risk of being hung up in terminology.

A questionnaire to evaluate faculty members was also suggested by the students. The questionnaire would be filled out by students and returned to the instructor, who would pass them on to administrators for review. This way, according to Brown, faculty members can better scrutinize their colleagues when the time comes for contract renewals or pay raises. Brown felt that students are capable of voicing their opinions but are afraid they won't be heard.

Students felt that a censorship board is not necessary because they have a right to say what they feel. The literature may contain a few four-letter words but this is what the student has on his mind, according to Brown.

AS FAR AS community reactions, Brown said that in his opinion members of the community are parents of some of the students at De Anza and are responsible for the way they raise their children. "They may as well know what their children really think. Tell them this is life."

The position papers of each segment of the conference were read at an initial meeting of all participants. The papers explained the position of each group in relation to power on campus. Later, in small groups, members struck out items they regarded as less important to making changes in College policy.

Presenting the position paper of the Board of Trustees, President Mary Lou Zoglin explained that the board is not likely to instigate changes having to do with the internal operation of the College unless something really goes wrong and blows up. As far as the board knows, things are going allright under the present policies.

"UNLESS WE HEAR from you people working in the College that there are areas where improvements can be made in internal operation, we are likely to go along with the status quo. We are ready and waiting to hear from you as to other areas in which you would like to have changes made."

Kafka's 'Trial' tops film bill

The film version of "The Trial," based on a work by Franz Kafka, will be shown tonight in the De Anza Forum building.

Directed by Orson Welles, the cast includes Anthony Perkins, Jeanne Moreau, Romy Schneider, Elsa Martinelli and Welles himself. The film deals with the story of a young man who is charged with nameless crimes by unidentified accusers.

"Tomorrow's Child," winner of an Honorable Mention at Foothill College's seventh annual Independent Film-Makers Festival last May, is also on the program. The film is a vignette of the effects of psychosis.

The program begins at 8 p.m. All tickets are 75 cents at the door.

Fall quarter final exam schedule set

Final examinations will be given in all courses except physical education activities and Psychology 50.

Faculty members will announce in each class the hour and day on which the examination will be given. Final examinations will not be given except at the scheduled time, but under extraordinary circumstances a student may petition the Academic Council in writing for special consideration.

Final examinations in separate laboratory course will be given on the last day the class meets in the quarter.

In each course the examination will be two hours in length, although part of the final examination may be given earlier during a regular class period. The hour at which the class begins determines the hour the examination is scheduled. English 1A, 1B and 102 students should check with their instructors for examination times. Classes beginning after the hour are considered as beginning on the hour.

Students with conflicts should notify the office of the Dean of Instruction. Those with four finals scheduled for the same day should see their counselors immediately.

Council to publish news flyer

A decision to publish a bi-weekly flyer containing news of student activities was made at the Student Council meeting Monday night.

The paper, which will be run by a member of the Student Council, a member of the Inter-Club Council (ICC) and a student-at-large, was initiated because it was felt that the student body is not being made sufficiently aware of ASDAC activities.

COMMUNICATION IS the biggest problem of student government, according to Tom Comer, freshman representative. A questionnaire taken in Psych 50 classes showed that 80 per cent of the students weren't aware of what was going on in student government. One student, when asked in the questionnaire why he did not vote in the last election, replied, "I didn't know there was an election."

"It's ridiculous," exclaimed Comer.

THE ENTIRE Student Council agreed that communication was deficient and that some sort of news flyer was needed. An hour discussion followed as to how this paper should be run. Three main positions emerged:

1. Better use should be made of existing communications facilities, La Voz and the Grapevine.

2. A newspaper should be published run entirely by the council.

3. A newspaper should be published by a coalition of council members and Poli. Sci. 50 students.

REED SPARKS, director of public events, spoke for the contingent of students who felt that La Voz and the Grapevine should be revised to contain more news of student government. "I don't think La Voz is doing its job," Sparks remarked. "The facilities that we have are used poorly." He felt that the council should be given a page in La Voz.

Mark Miller, director of mass communications, and Comer felt that La Voz should be left alone.

Joaquin Herrero, assistant director of activities, told the council that using the Grapevine for the news flyer would not be feasible.

SEVERAL COUNCIL members felt that the Poli. Sci. 50 class, which sits in on every Student Council meeting, should be in charge of the flyer.

Jan Shanahan, publicity chairman, thought that it was a job for the publicity chairman, not the Poli. Sci. 50 class. "Poli. Sci. doesn't know what's going on," she explained. Jan Finn, director of activities, and Maureen Manley, social chairman, agreed with Miss Shanahan.

Alan Booth, former ICC chairman, was afraid that if the paper was run by a member of the Student Council it would turn into a party organ. An underground paper might result as a backlash, Booth warned.

Winter formal by candlelight

"Candlelight Ball" will be the theme of the winter formal Friday, Dec. 6, at the Hilton Hotel in San Francisco.

This year the ball will be a joint affair with Foothill College. The two colleges are competing to have the largest number of students attend the formal. "We're really expecting a large turnout, about 250 couples," said Maureen Manley, ASDAC social chairman.

The director of activities at Foothill may get an airplane carrying a banner to fly over both campuses to promote the ball, according to Miss Manley.

The winter formal will be held in ballrooms four, five and six of the Hilton, which is located at the corner of Mason and O'Farrell. The dance begins at 10 p.m. and concludes at 2 a.m.

The hours are late because this was the only time the ballrooms were available, according to Miss Manley.

Entertainment will be provided by Earl Heckscher's band. Heckscher is the son of longtime San Francisco band leader Ernie Heckscher. "He's really good!" exclaimed Miss Manley.

Students will probably be able to park in the hotel's garage.

Tickets for the winter formal are $5 per couple. They will be put on sale shortly.

Decorations will be on a gold and white theme. The hotel will provide some of the decorations, including a Christmas tree.

Chorales pool musical efforts in concert

The combined De Anza and Foothill chorales will be featured tonight in the opening concert of the third season of the Nova Vista Orchestra, the college community orchestra of the Foothill district.

Under the direction of De Anza instructor Nelson Tandoc and David Wilson of Foothill, the 130-voice chorale with featured soloists Byron Jones and Miss Billie Praefke will present Ralph Vaughan-Williams' "Dona Nobis Pacem." According to Tandoc, the work, although written 32 years ago, is timely because it is a protest against war. Vaughan-Williams primarily uses Walt Whitman's poem, "Drum Taps," in the work, with the conclusion composed of excerpts from the Bible.

Also on the program are Symphony No. 4 in G Major, Opus 88, Anton Dvorak, and Handel's Overture to the Fireworks.

The concert begins at 8:15 p.m. in the Foothill College Theatre. Tickets are $1.50 and are available at the Foothill College box office.

Will talk = action?

Campus power, and how to use it to its fullest extent, was discussed at the student-faculty-administration Asilomar retreat. When the representatives of De Anza left Asilomar Monday, some good ideas for improving the College had been drafted. But, are these ideas still at Asilomar? If only ideas are going to be bounced around, why waste the time of campus personnel in just sitting, talking, eating, sleeping and driving?

Nothing was accomplished if only ideas were discussed and proposals drafted. In order to get these ideas put into effect, they have to be approved by certain boards and councils. It is absolutely pointless for mature people to travel 100 miles just to chat, when these same people are on campus daily.

Certainly some intangible benefits should accrue from the retreat — perhaps a better understanding of varying and often conflicting points of view, for example. But we think De Anza students expect some tangible results from that two-day session.

Much of the burden lies squarely with the 35 students who attended. Perhaps after the glow of good fellowship fades, our student leaders will come up with solutions and action as a result of the retreat. A solution to the problem of how to get the student body and student government on the same wave length would be a good beginning.

But the rest of us must share this burden, too. It should be our responsibility to ask questions, to expect answers, to listen and to act. In short, no group of student leaders, faculty members and administrators can make De Anza a better place without help from the rest of us.

SJS freezes enrollment, eleven more close doors too

Along with 12 other state colleges, San Jose State has frozen enrollment for the spring semester.

Ernest A. Becker, dean of students for the 19-campus system, explained that the number of new and returning students in the fall term at almost all of the state colleges exceeded all predictions.

"Therefore, at this time, it is virtually certain that the California state colleges will be unable to accommodate all qualified students seeking entrance to winter and spring terms," he added.

Dr. Shipnuck, assistant dean of students at De Anza, said that it would probably affect the students at De Anza if they were planning to transfer after one year, instead of two. However, this freeze won't affect students who put in their applications before Oct. 16.

Other colleges with limitations placed on enrollment are San Luis Obispo, Chico, Humboldt, Fresno, Fullerton, Long Beach, Sacramento, San Diego, San Fernando, San Francisco and Sonoma.

Cleaver to talk in gym Dec. 5

At the request of the Experimental College, Eldridge Cleaver will speak in the De Anza gymnasium on Dec. 5 at 1 p.m.

Cleaver is the Black Panther Minister of Information for Self Defense and was the Presidential candidate for the Peace and Freedom Party in the '68 elections. He is the author of Soul On Ice, an autobiography in which he attributes his education to the Los Angeles and Oakland ghettos, as well as the Folsom and Soledad Prisons. He recently has been the center of controversy regarding his appearance as a guest lecturer at the University of California at Berkeley.

The Experimental College tries to present controversial viewpoints to the students in an unbiased fashion, according to William Skyles, advisor.

Tickets are 75 cents with a student body card, and $1 without.

Letter to editor

La Voz reaps complaints, praise

Dear Editor:

As I gaze through your paper, I find myself jumping from one column to another and from one page to another as well. I find no table of contents, I find no sectionalism on your paper either.

I don't find the things that I think the students would appreciate most. You should think of things that will benefit students as well as interest them. Try and realize what the kids need. A good, as well as the most common, need would be money. In the counseling office there must be over 100 cards waiting students to work. How many are in the paper? Can you think of a better place to illustrate job opportunities than in the paper?

Most students don't have the time to read a whole paper, so why don't you try to help the students find what they're looking for?

David Lambroughton
De Anza student

In a newspaper the size of La Voz, space is at a premium. To include an index and label each section would be a waste of space. News appears on page 1 and the back pages, editorial copy on the middle pages and the last page or so is devoted to sports. The job cards you refer to are handy to students where they are now and if you'll check, you'll find that only 12 are current to the month of November. — Ed.

Dear Editor:

La Voz is a very good newspaper, but you can't really get interested in it because you run into too many advertisements. Almost every paper has at least two or three ads. I realize you must have some in order to put out the newspaper, but there is a limit to things and I think may-

Ads make up 35 per cent of La Voz as opposed to 65 per cent of most professional newspapers. Without advertising, which finances 40 per cent of our production costs, La Voz would not be printed as often or as large as it is now. The advertisements are geared to the college student and so rather than letting them become an annoyance, you might see if you can take advantage of the special bargains offered in the ads. — Ed.

Dear Editor:

First of all, I speak on behalf of the Mexican-Americans and I'm firmly proud of being one, not only yesterday, but today and always. I presume you just can't wait for our thanks or even our congratulations for displaying one of us in your advertisement of Cupertino Florist. I'm sure you realize that we are very happy or should I say the opposite, disgusted!

It makes me feel sick whenever I see one of us being pictured as a bandido. If we were really bandidos, this school would be in turmoil. You don't want this to happen, or do you? We don't look that bad, so please don't picture us that way.

Course files to be available

Arrangements have been finalized to have a complete file of the context of classes offered by De Anza College. It will soon be possible for students to know more precisely what classes will involve.

The file will describe courses, their requirements, the value of the courses for students, and methods used for evaluating the outcome. Also included in the file is a list of the books needed, college facilities and a minimum of material the student will have to furnish.

The information will be kept in the library at the reserved book counter.

the last issue of La Voz, concerning what he termed a "racist ad."

Having had Mr. Griese as an instructor for English 1A, I know that he is a strong believer in "critical thinking." Critical thinking means considering all sides of an issue, rationally reaching a conclusion, and backing up that conclusion with concrete facts and examples. Mr. Griese's letter is a product of emotional reaction, totally lacking in rational, considered thought. As such, he is giving a very poor example to his students.

Dons grab two crowns from WVC

Tankers No. 1

De Anza earned a spot in the Nor-Cal Water Polo Tourney by edging West Valley last Friday, 4-3, for the conference title.

The tourney will be held here starting at 9 a.m. today and 10 a.m. tomorrow. De Anza will be facing San Joaquin Delta at 10 a.m. and San Mateo at 4 p.m. today.

SIX TEAMS representing three conferences will battle it out for the top two places. These two teams will then go to the state championships in December. The schools trying for those berths are West Valley, Foothill, American River, San Mateo, San Joaquin Delta and De Anza.

"Based on season records, no team will have a clear-cut edge," Don coach Art Lambert said.

De Anza won its second water polo championship in as many years. Last year the Dons defeated West Valley, 8-7.

THIS YEAR THE Dons had to come from behind to pull it out. They were down, 3-2, with only minutes remaining. Jim Foreman tossed in his second penalty shot of the day with one minute to go. Then, with just 14 seconds remaining in the game, Lance Dilloway broke the ice by firing in the winning point. Mark Evans provided the Dons with their first point.

De Anza controlled the ball throughout most of the game but couldn't capitalize on it. Lambert stated, "We're happy to win, but we didn't play very well."

George Spear, who should be given some credit for the win in substituting for Lambert earlier in the year, was a spectator in the crowd. He attributed the victory to the "constant pressure by the defense."

Harriers eye Nor-Cal win

The Don harrier squad, led by Art Rodriguez and Steve Fagundes, will vie today in the Nor-Cal Championships at Foothill College beginning at 1 p.m.

At the end of the four-mile competition, the top five teams will travel to the state meet to be held in San Diego at Grossmont Junior College.

Coach Don Vick's charges have been working towards the Nor-Cal meet for the whole season. This time their various dual meet victories and Conference Championship will be left behind. The race is based on sole effort and not on past laurels.

Vick is hoping for a spot in the top five and thinks that the team has a fair shake in gaining a berth to the state meet.

The tough Don defense stops the West Valley ball carrier as he tries to sweep around right end. The defensive unit was tough throughout the game as it made two interceptions, recovered two fumbles and caused two safeties.

Hoopsters battle 'injury jinx' again

By TOM JONES
La Voz Sports Writer

A team free from injuries is the wish of all coaches, including De Anza's basketball mentor, Tony Nunes.

Injuries plagued the Dons last year with many players not completing the season. They hope the trend hasn't started again as Rick Korte, a top returning letterman, broke a foot two weeks ago. "We have to beat the injury jinx," Nunes stated.

De Anza, since changing from the Coast Conference to the Camino Norte league, will be facing a much tougher schedule. Last year the Dons won the championship because the first three teams were disqualified for use of ineligible players. But this year they hope to win it on their own. Nunes feels that the strongest schools this year should be Contra Costa, West Valley and Marin.

He went on to point out that the Dons are a young team with freshmen possibly taking four of the five starting positions. "We are real ambitious and optimistic, but realistic," said Nunes. "Our strongest point is that we are balanced all the way around, and the weakest should be inexperience and outside shooting."

Gridders take crown

The De Anza Dons became the first Santa Clara Valley junior college team to win a football championship in nine years last Saturday.

De Anza won a share of the Camino Norte Conference championship by rolling past West Valley 27-21. The College of Marin is co-champion.

Because Marin had beaten the Dons earlier in the season 13-12, they will represent the Camino Norte in the state playoffs in San Diego on November 29 and 30.

There is a chance for the Dons to go to the playoffs if they remain the only co-champion among the junior college conferences. There are six berths in the playoffs and only five teams. One stipulation in the rules states that a co-champion can take over the extra berth.

Coach Bob Pifferini of De Anza said he was "very happy" with the Don win over the Vikings. "The win was a team effort with certain people coming through in key situations."

West Valley scored first after only two plays. The first play moved the ball from the 50 to the 27 on a pass by Viking QB Bill Barnes. Their score came on a run by back Bob Huber.

The Dons tied the score up with 2:30 left in the first quarter. On fourth down and six to go for a TD, quarterback Larry Lorenze rolled out to his right and threw a jump pass over three Viking defenders. Les Murphy caught the pass in the end zone. The PAT by Bill Corliss was good.

Late in the half with West Valley controlling the ball, QB Barnes slipped in the end zone giving the Dons a safety.

The Vikings had to kick off. The Dons received the ball on the kickoff but were forced to punt. The ball rolled down to the 2 yard line of West Valley where back Dave Ray took it. He ran through the end zone trying to work clear but was tackled by Dyke Johnson for another safety. This made the score 11-7 in favor of the Dons.

When only a minute was left in the half the Dons got another touchdown. The ball was on the 2 yard line and Lorenze ran it over for the score.

During the following plays the teams exchanged punts. De Anza managed to move the ball up to the 30 yard line. A field goal was attempted but it only reached the 2 yard line. West Valley was stopped on the next three plays. On fourth down the Vikings punted to their own 17 yard line.

On the first play from scrimmage the ball was given to back Ken Barber who ran 17 yards for the winning touchdown. The PAT was good.

Ken Barber and Bob Mackey were named Players of the Week in the Santa Clara Valley.

Why should I waste my time?

I can't afford s-l-o-w reading speeds

"Slow readers work harder for their grades," Lorna Lawson says. "Without Readak, I'd be just another average reader. That's not good enough."

"I've got to succeed in college. And I want to do other things besides study all the time I'm here."

Lorna knows so-called average readers are ten years behind the times. Back in 1958, 250 words per minute was an average reading speed. But it's all different today. Ask any college sophomore. You'll be told 400 to 500 words per minute is a must for ordinary study.

"I've learned one thing," Lorna says. "Knowing how to read fast isn't enough. To stay ahead, you've got to know how to skim at least 3,000 words a minute when the pressure's on. And you need to understand everything you read."

Many people agree with Lorna. They're the ones who know what it takes to make it in school today.

Class presidents, school paper editors, valedictorians, scholarship winners, athletes and many others choose Readak speed reading programs.

These outstanding people are already superior students. But, after Readak training, they won't need to work as hard to keep up with heavy reading loads in senior high or college classes. They'll have more free time.

At Readak, average readers break out of the pack and stay ahead. Faster reading gives them time for all the things they've been missing. Effective reading not only helps them learn more. It creates time for other things.

It's no accident that Readak programs have been conducted at Santa Clara University, San Francisco College for Women, Notre Dame College and Westmont College — to name just a few of many.

Lorna Lawson is a freshman at the University of San Francisco. Her high school grade point average was 3.8.

What's more, scientists, technicians and professionals at NASA Ames Research Center, Lockheed Missile and Space Division, Ampex, Stanford Research Institute, and many major industries have called on Readak to help improve their reading effectiveness.

"Readak's program is exciting and stimulating," Lorna says. You'll learn all forms of hand-pacing, skimming, scanning, over-viewing, pre-reading, outlining, technical and critical reading. In other words, you'll learn everything it takes to read two, three or even four times faster.

Readak students use these new skills in their first class. Grades go up. Study is easier. Reading assignments become exciting challenges, not causes for worry.

Now's your chance to develop the reading skills you'll need in school — and for many years to come.

Readak's small classes make it possible for you to learn with people you know and understand.

Since 1957, we've shown more than 300,000 students how to read faster, comprehend more.

They learned that success on campus, and in a career, calls for reading skills far above the so-called average.

Now's the time to plan for tomorrow's successes. Our next class is already filling up. But there's still room for those who sign up now.

The tuition for our program is only $95. It may be paid in advance with a discount, or budgeted over a 3-month period. Special group rates are available to clubs and organizations.

Classes meet once each week, for 2½ hour sessions. Our next class starts:

Monday, Nov. 25
7:30 p.m.
Saturday, Dec. 7
9:00 a.m.

Enroll now. For more information, and a copy of our free brochure, phone 248-7674, or 326-5988.
