De Anza College  How to Successfully Study Accounting

- Cumulative Study

Accounting is certainly NOT a mystery, and it can be easy to learn. The major secret to learning accounting is remembering that it is a cumulative study subject based on the first three or four chapters, depending upon which textbook you are using.

Each learning objective builds on the previously learned concepts and procedures. The accounting course is organized so that you will learn the most fundamental concepts and procedures first; then, you will be required to build on these concepts and procedures.

To learn accounting, you must master these first chapters which are the basis for all chapters to follow. When students have difficulty with accounting, it is generally because they have either forgotten the earlier materials or did not learn it well enough to move forward.

- Be Prepared

Before going to class, read the text book assignment, exercises and homework problems. Make a list of questions you have to ask the instructor. Writing out your questions makes it easier to ask them.

- Complete Exercises and Homework

Complete the homework in ink/pencil; make corrections with a different colored ink/pencil. This will allow you to review those areas that may be difficult for you or that need correction.

- Keep Up With the Work

Waiting until the last minute does not give you the opportunity to completely understand the learning objectives. Do not use memorization as a substitute for understanding. Accounting is a conceptual and an applied subject, therefore you will need to understand both the reasons and the mechanics of accounting. Cramming does not work.

- Take Notes, Make Friends by Studying in a Group

Studies indicate that you will remember 10-15\% of what was said in class. However, if you write it down, your retention rate increases to $85 \%$. Working in a group has several benefits: increases accounting knowledge, improves your critical thinking skills, and improves your communication skills.
