1. Program (Account) Name: Red Wheelbarrow Literary Magazine, Student Edition

2. Is this a new DASG account? Yes Do DASG Account Number: 41-57760

- 3. Amount requested for 2021-2022 $____$1,000
- 4. Total amount allocated for 2021-2022 $ $1,000
- 5. How long has this program existed? In various forms, formerly as Bottomfish, for 50+ years
- 6. Number of students directly served in this program: 200-30 estimate (staff, contributors, readers)
- Please ACCURATELY and THOROUGHLY complete numbers 7 10 and use additional sheets if necessary.
- 7. How have you been meeting or how do you plan to meet the budget stipulation of requiring that all students benefiting from DASG funds allocated to you have paid the $10 DA Student Body Fee and are DASG Members (DASG Budget Stipulation # 1 Staff members are all students and can be polled. Do you want us to poll students who contribute art and poetry to the magazine as well? That we've still never done. All contributors are students from that particular academic year—that we do know.
- 8. What would be the impact if DASG did not completely fund this request? We would request a special allocation next year. Failing that, we would appeal to the Language Arts Division for emergency funding—but LA money is already fully committed. And the college is already paying for the two (reduced already from three) Red Wheelbarrow classes and is unable to provide additional funding. We barely survived the notorious "viability committee" a few years ago. We have to self-fund and also to enroll 20 or more students in our courses each quarter to survive. In the past, some faculty members have contributed personal funds (even up to $500) out of pocket—just to keep the magazine and annual awards afloat. Realistically, without DASB support, we would publish online only (or cease publication entirely for some number of years), and since magazine sales drive the annual student awards, those would likely be reduced as well. We could always "rob Peter to pay Paul" and diminish the quality of the National Edition in collaboration with Poetry Center San José in order to make certain the Student Edition survives. The Red Wheelbarrow student edition magazine culture is a time-tested, successful partnership between DASG and the academic side of the college. The annual national edition can (and must) try to pay for itself, but the student edition, for which we are asking only for print-fund support, is not a commercial enterprise but actualizes every year a multi-faceted and enduring devotion to student creativity. It's a great investment and return—empowering student writers, artists, poets, and editors.

	Question / Inquiry	Program Response
2.	How will your program expand students' perspectives and positively impact their lives and the community? (250 words max)	Red Wheelbarrow (our student literary magazine program) brings people together. We listen to one another more deeply through the arts. We explore values as writers and artists and express our feelings during hard and changing times. The arts, including the literary magazine, are fundamental platforms for marginalized voices in a diverse society and for our most honest expressions. It is with awe each year that I observe how many of our most marginalized and brilliant and vulnerable students in creative arts excel. The creative arts are first responders for the vulnerable; we are on the front lines of appreciating one another for our diversity and for our true stories and struggles coping with marginalization. We also are a (arts/ literary) community rooted in respect and listening and caring for one another's deepest stories, emotions, and craft. We also give cash awards to the best student artists, writers, and poets. We further create pride in self- expression through guiding one another through the publication process.

3.	Go through the most recent DASG Budget	 Fund programs that help students succeed and enable
	Guiding Principles and explain how your	them to achieve their academic and personal goals at De program fits each of them or as many as	Anza College. Yes, this is what we do; in fact, we are a unique possible. Please do not merely copy and	program in the way that we combine academic paste the DASG Guiding Principles. The	achievement and personal growth in what we ask of our
	DASG Budget Goals/DASG Budget Guiding	writers, artists, poets, and even editors.
	Principles are available at	 Fund programs that promote leadership, civic www.deanza.edu/dasg/budget	engagement, and student advocacy among all students. The course EWRT 68 has leadership sections and academic rigor.
		Diversity is at the core of the course and the magazine.
		 Fund programs that promote diversity, equity, and inclusion among all students. This the case.
		 Fund programs that follow environmentally sustainable practices. Yes we do, using online publication in conjunction with a short print run. We waste less paper than ever with our use of PDFs and digital layout and proofreading.
		• Fund programs based on the current value and needs of the program rather than solely on historical funding trends.
		Absolutely. We've been proud to keep our DASG request at $1,000 through our creative fundraising through the foundation and our competitive print-pricing through Bookmobile. We get so much for every dollar. We are proud to be posting the PDF online but also believe as strongly as ever in the beauty and importance of the printed object, the book itself.
		• Fund programs that benefit students during the 2022-2023 fiscal year. Yes, end of each academic year, we are a capstone arts program, bringing together the best artists and creative writers in celebration. In 2020 and 2021, we did this very successfully in Zoom, and plan to do the same this spring of 2022.
		• Fund programs that only benefit DASG constituents. Yes.
		 Fund programs that promote student retention by enhancing the quality of education at De Anza College. Yes, we do this. Marginalized and psychologically vulnerable students need art and poetry. They need to be seen and humanized through the arts. Often, our students in the arts are only at De Anza for those arts programs. Other students find it a crucial joy and release within the stressful academic,
		work, and personal lives they are navigating.
		 Fund unique programs that fall outside the purview of what should normally be funded by the college. Wouldn't it be great if the college fully funded the literary magazine. The fact that we still have the dedicated EWRT 68A/Z course is in itself a miracle. But there is no additional college money to print the journal; divisions don't have money to dole out for that. THANK YOU for stepping in on behalf of students who write and paint, etc., and want to understand one another inside and out.

	Question / Inquiry	Program Response
4.	Explain how your program advertises and promotes itself to all students. Has your program made extra effort to market and reach underserved students? If so, describe how. If not, describe what challenges your program faces in trying to do so. Provide a clear plan for the current academic year as well as any marketing material you will or have used.	Our well-publicized end-of-year event is a major campus awards ceremony and reading (in 2020 and 2021, of course, it was in Zoom). The event is promoted on the campus-wide calendar. The event is student emceed by diverse presenters and showcases artists and writers and poets from our full campus community, bringing together all poetic styles for a festive magazine launch. Without the magazine itself, and DASG support of it, we'd have none of this festive literary atmosphere and community. We promote our editing course, our "call for submissions," and our launch event, using all available means including class visits, faculty and students disseminating fliers, and social media. We have our own website within the De Anza English/ Creative Writing site as well. The book is also stocked in the campus bookstore (will be when we reopen). English faculty often recommend a variety of talents to join our spring course, including underserved students to work on the magazine each year. I specifically request these individualized recommendations. This has been a good recruiting strategy in terms of creating diversity. We also recruit editors and submissions from diverse First Thursday crowds or lit or creative writing courses where diverse and creative leaders might easily be found.
5.	Explain how your program promotes equity within the program and on campus. For example: equity training for all staff and student leaders, hiring from underrepresented communities, etc.	Red Wheelbarrow , called "Literary Magazine, Student Edition" in the course catalogue, is the very definition of equity-in-motion. The core value is human expression (poetry, fiction, art, performance on our YouTube channel— and collaboration with the Euphrat and with First Thursday open mic events as well as the campus creative writing program. I say "in motion" because striving for equity is about always lifting, listening, learning. Creative writing programs (like all the arts) always have the capability to bring people and communities together. I know I strive for this. And I know each year I need to be better and better at it. Your question refers to training and hiring. Our student editors get course credit and day-one are required to be inclusive. Just look at the 2020 issue with its interview feature on page 23:" Community Voices after the Murder of George Floyd Kassandra Tejeda 23" as an example of how we were able to respond with literary creativity during that period by drawing on the strengths of student editors and their capability for leadership.

	Question / Inquiry	Program Response
6.	How has your program adapted to providing its services online? Alternatively, please provide a clear plan for how your program would provide online services if needed in the future.	If you go to https://www.deanza.edu/english/creative- writing/red-wheelbarrow-student.html , you can see the way the Red Wheelbarrow student edition has adjusted to online education and publication. The 2021 spring student edition of Red Wheelbarrow is posted there to download as a PDF, and scroll down to see (and download) 2020 as well. We feel lucky to live within a culture that is not gong to make us choose between online and print—we know we will continue to do both since we value the BOOK as art, and as a fabulous medium of shared human culture. We've also adapted to running the EWRT 68A/AX meta-course as fully online rather than hybrid. By running the weekly meeting as synchronous, and by using Canvas as always to post and discuss submissions, I'd say our editing community was as lively and tight as ever these past two years.
7.	Please indicate which object codes are critical for DASG to fund this year. Please do NOT list down all of the object codes.	Only printing (4060).

Data Sheets/Attachments

Please attach supporting documents of the following questions and list the document names accordingly. Covering all the bullet points will be beneficial for our review process. IF attachment is not required or missing, please give your thorough answers below.

	Question / Inquiry	Document Name / Additional Response
1.	 ENROLLMENT Number of total AND new active students over the past 3 years Number of enrollments retained (stayed for more than a quarter) Number of students enrolled in online services Does your program serve a certain demographic or the whole De Anza population? Racial demographics (if possible) 	EWRT 68A/AX is the metacourse for our literary magazine program. We've had good enrollment out of necessity. Our language arts division and our vice president of instruction require 20+ seat counts. I've been able to achieve this recruiting effectively into our small elective program. We have a few returning student each year, usually say 15%. They are able to take the "B" or "C" leadership course sections. EWRT 68 is a meta-course. The past two years this formerly hybrid course and print-only journal has adjusted as fully online—and as now both a print journal and downloadable PDF online. The whole creative writing program has done well in terms of equity according to our most recent department program reviews. We serve an expanding cross-section of the De Anza population, and I say expanding because there is always more work to be done. In 2019 as a hybrid course, we finished with 21 or so, in 2020 it was down to around 12, then in 2022 back up to 19. Do you really need portal print-outs to back up this data? I could do this and then redact the grades and upload this to you. These are the student staff members who edit the magazine. Remember, we are also serving the 50 or more students who are published in the journal, their families, friends, and readers. This is a widely diverse group.
2.	 STUDENT FEEDBACK Attach student feedback forms, surveys, etc. How has your program responded to suggestions made by students in the previous year? 	Students tend to love the program and lead it. The ERT 68A/AX course was officially reviewed by our Language Arts Dean in 2021, but no student evals. I could provide you with his comentary. Our graduation poet last year mentioned the program at graduation as did our college president. We've made significant changes responding to Covid and to our changing culture, following the exigencies of the time (online posting of magazine, YouTube channel) and student leadership

3.	 FUNDING List any funding from the college, sources of income, any grants, and any other source (include ALL Account Numbers, Account Names, Account Balances, and Account Purposes/Restrictions) Attach account reports of all sources of funding 	 844618-551000. This is our foundation account. Our fall national edition, runs a national prize with Poetry Center San José. We have been able to use entry fees from that prize to pay for our Red Wheelbarrow award scholarships through the foundation the past several years. In fact we have insisted on it :-) ! These cash prizes go to ten students per year. These awards are not funded by DASG. DASG funds (partial) printing costs only. 115294 - 238005 - 671000 (INDEX: 250294) This is our FUND 15 account. Printing, layout, design, and proofreading costs are paid through this account. Printing & design/ proofreading costs might cost $1,500, for example, but we only ask for $1,000 from DASG. The Fund 15 is replenished each year only by the foundation monies and sales. Sales have been around $1,000 per year up until Covid for both issues combined. In other words, we normally take in about $500 for each issue in sales. Covid has really hurt us here. We plan to do a spring 2022 sales fundraiser on campus to help us replenish our Fund 15.
