Course Description:

This is an intensive study of fiction with reading, discussion, and analysis of structure and meaning in selected novels and short stories. Fiction selection will include texts varied in subject, form, and structure, and will represent writers from wide, and diverse, perspectives. Much of this course is designed around a seminar-style learning format, which means there will be a great deal of discussion and collaboration—alongside the traditional methods of short essay writing and writing tests. Your active involvement is integral to your success.

Student Learning Outcomes:

- 1) Identify, articulate, and evaluate the nature and variety of fictional texts, styles, conventions, and techniques.
- 2) Analyze fiction in writing from multiple critical perspectives.

Course Requirements:

This is an online course with class meetings on Zoom twice a week. In order to achieve the student learning outcomes for this course, you must complete all the reading and writing assignments on time as well as attend on Zoom. To do well, you will have to complete all the discussions and reflections for a particular module by the time they are due or you won't get credit. If you miss a deadline for either online discussions or reflections, you won't get credit. Think of the weekly discussions and reflections as the additional 1/2 hour of course time for each Zoom session. If you don't post, it's like skipping a Zoom session. If you don't post, you've, in effect, missed class and can't make up the time. You will also be graded for your participation - how often you interact with the course. In order to do well, you need to regularly spend time accessing the content and completing your assignments. If you stop attending without contacting me, I will assume that you no longer intend to finish the class and I will drop you. If you miss the first class on Monday, September 26, I will drop you to add someone else. If you are dropped, I will not be able to add you back. Finally, if you have stopped attending and are on my roster after the finally drop date of Friday, November 18, you will fail the class.

All assignments must be typed and in the required formats - MLA 8 for all formal graded essays. All graded essays must be have the required length, formatting and other requirements to pass. Any essays that are too short, off-topic or missing elements such as a Works Cited page or in-text citations will not be given credit or be evaluated by me.

Please note: I don't accept late essay assignments without prior approval. The day the assignment is due is too late.

Assignments and Evaluation:

The assignments and their weights are as follows:

2 graded short essays (3-5 pages)	10% each
In Class mid-term	10%
Final Essay (6-8 pages)	20%
Online Discussions	15%
Reflections (1-2 pages each)	15%

The grade scale is as follows: A, 9-10: B, 7-8; C, 5-6; D, 3-4; F, < 3 or 0 (plagiarized or late assignments).

Grading student writing is a somewhat subjective process. However, I will be looking at the following criteria to evaluate your work:

- technical proficiency (clarity, coherence, well-chosen language, clear sentence structure, coherent use of MLA style)
- development/complexity (well-developed thesis statements and paragraphs, effective transitions, well-integrated source material and sophistication of rhetorical arguments)

Late Work Policy: You may turn in one essay late. This only applies to work before Week Ten of the quarter. You may not hand the last essay in later than the deadline I've given because I have to get grades in. You must take the online midterm when I give it or your won't get credit. Please speak to me if there are extenuating circumstances that do not fit inside this policy for the late essay only.

Zoom Behavior Code and Canvas Netiquette:

Real learning can only take place in an environment of mutual understanding and respect for difference. I view my classroom, either virtual or in-person, as a safe haven where people can feel empowered to express their ideas about the complex issues raised by the literary works we'll be reading. Since the texts raise controversial questions about home, belonging, exile, marginalization, suicide, poverty and other difficult themes, students may not always agree on interpretations. In fact, critics have been arguing about the meaning of certain texts for centuries because literary works are free constructions of the imagination and can't be reduced to one "correct" reading. If they can, then they're functioning as propaganda which is the opposite of how I believe literary texts should function. The strength of my classes, whether fully online or in-person, are our discussions which means I protect those spaces where we interact so we can all learn from each other. The same holds true for online discussion posts. Here's a discussion on Canvas Netiquette (Links to an external site.) for your online interactions. The college will enforce all policies and procedures set forth in the De Anza College Policies and FHDA District Policies. In particular, please pay attention to district policies on Academic Integrity. Remember appropriate classroom behavior involves the topic-appropriate, cross-sharing of ideas and interactions with respect for your classmates, and me, your instructor. Please be actively engaged and involved in group work and the class session both online on Zoom and offline in your posts. When on Zoom, I expect you not to be on your cell phone or doing other work while we're meeting together online. Active engagement is 20% of your grade. Any student disrupting the classroom engagement, or not following college district behavior standards, may be asked to leave the Zoom class session. Campus Administrative follow-up may result.

Academic Integrity:

For real learning to take place and to be fair to all students, I need to know exactly what your true level and skills are. This is particularly true when it comes to an online course. Remember - all students are subject to the college's policy on academic integrity that defines cheating and plagiarism as follows:

Cheating is the act of obtaining or attempting to obtain credit for academic work through the use of dishonest, deceptive or fraudulent means.

- Copying, in part or in whole, from someone else's test
- Submitting work presented previously in another course, if contrary to the rules of either course
- Altering or interfering with grading
- Using or consulting, during an examination, any sources, consulting with others, use of electronic equipment including cell phones and PDA's, or use of materials not authorized by the instructor
- Committing other acts that defraud or misrepresent.

Plagiarism is representing the work of someone else as your own.

- Incorporating the ideas, words, sentences, paragraphs, or parts of another person's writings, without giving appropriate credit, and representing the product as one's own
- Representing another person's artistic or scholarly works such as musical compositions, computer programs, photographs, paintings, drawings or sculptures as your own
- Submitting a paper purchased from a research or term paper service, including the internet
- Undocumented Web source usage.

Other Specific Examples of Academic Dishonesty:

- Purposely allowing another student to copy from your paper during a test
- Giving homework, term paper or other academic work to another student to plagiarize
- Having another person submit any work in your name
- Lying to an instructor or college official to improve your grade
- Altering graded work after it has been returned, then submitting the work for re-grading
- Stealing tests
- Forging signatures on drop/add cards or other college documents

- Collaboration without permission of instructor.
- Gaining unlawful or unauthorized access to college or district computers or servers.

The first time you intentionally cheat or plagiarize, I will give you a 0 for that assignment and you will not be able to make it up. If you cheat or plagiarize a second time, you may risk failing the class and other administrative sanctions,
