COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed to introduce students to an array of varied fictional texts. Through an intimate examination of these texts, we will closely analyze and discuss culturally diverse voices and perspectives to gain a deep understanding of human culture and consciousness. We will practice a variety of rhetorical strategies that will include a grace for nuance, subtlety, and the art of descriptive writing used in iconic texts. We will discuss, interpret, analyze, synthesize, and compare a broad range of fictional styles, conventions, and techniques.

Successful completion of ELIT 10 will culminate in satisfying the Humanities general education (GE) requirement for the following GE patterns: IGTEC Area 3B/IG3B, CSU Area C2, and De Anza Area 2GC2. To satisfy the aforementioned general education requirement, students must earn a grade of C or higher.

INSTRUCTOR'S GOAL

This particular ELIT 10 class is structured on reading, writing, and discussing human consciousness, culture and how these stories translate to contemporary society. We will begin by reading about belonging and the art of science through the lens of Mary Shelley's iconic and classic Frankenstein. Week three we will move toward a more contemporary text, Junot Díaz's

Pulitzer Prize novel The Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao, and we will end the quarter with Barbara Kingsolver’s Pulitzer Prize novel Demon Copperhead.

The class will be founded on deep reading, which includes using a variety of strategies to help comprehend collegiate works of fiction. These reading strategies will also improve your writing; the more you understand the text, the better you will be able to articulate and craft a well written response both through formal and informal essays as well as short written responses.

I intend to provide an environment of trust and mutual support that fosters intellectual thought and personal growth. Literature creates empathy; reading and learning about fictional characters allows you to see beyond yourself and to experience feelings, emotions, situations you would never personally encounter. Reading allows you to intimately delve into the mind and soul of a character, explore strange and different places, understand historical settings outside of contemporary society. Texts shift your perspective and allow you to think about possibilities and ways of living you never thought possible. Reading alters you, and this evolution lends to self-awareness and personal growth.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Identify, articulate and evaluate the nature and variety of fictional texts, styles, conventions and techniques
- Analyze fiction in writing from multiple critical perspectives

THE CLASS FRAMEWORK: HABITS OF THE MIND

Habits of mind—ways of approaching learning that are both intellectual and practical—are crucial for all college-level learners. Beyond knowing particular facts or completing mandatory readings, students who develop these habits of mind approach learning from an active stance. These habits help students succeed in a variety of fields and disciplines. They are cultivated both inside and outside school. Teachers can do much to develop activities and assignments that foster the kind of thinking that lies behind these habits and prepare students for the learning they will experience in college and beyond.

These habits include:

Curiosity

– the desire to know more about the world.

Curiosity is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- use inquiry as a process to develop questions relevant for authentic audiences within a variety of disciplines;
- seek relevant authoritative information and recognize the meaning and value of that information;
- conduct research using methods for investigating questions appropriate to the discipline; and
- communicate their findings in writing to multiple audiences inside and outside school using discipline-appropriate conventions.

Openness

– the willingness to consider new ways of being and thinking in the world.

Openness is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- examine their own perspectives to find connections with the perspectives of others;
- practice different ways of gathering, investigating, developing, and presenting information; and
- listen to and reflect on the ideas and responses of others—both peers and instructors—to their writing.

Engagement

– a sense of investment and involvement in learning.

Engagement is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- make connections between their own ideas and those of others;
- find meanings new to them or build on existing meanings as a result of new connections; and
- act upon the new knowledge that they have discovered.

Creativity

– the ability to use novel approaches for generating, investigating, and representing ideas.
Creativity is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- take risks by exploring questions, topics, and ideas that are new to them;
- use methods that are new to them to investigate questions, topics, and ideas;
- represent what they have learned in a variety of ways; and
- evaluate the effects or consequences of their creative choices.

Persistence

– the ability to sustain interest in and attention to short- and long-term projects.

Persistence is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- commit to exploring, in writing, a topic, idea, or demanding task;
- grapple with challenging ideas, texts, processes, or projects;
- follow through, over time, to complete tasks, processes, or projects; and
- consistently take advantage of in-class (peer and instructor responses) and out-of-class (writing or learning center support) opportunities to improve and refine their work.

Responsibility

– the ability to take ownership of one’s actions and understand the consequences of those actions for oneself and others.

Responsibility is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- recognize their own role in learning;
- act on the understanding that learning is shared among the writer and others—students, instructors, and the institution, as well as those engaged in the questions and/or fields in which the writer is interested; and
- engage and incorporate the ideas of others, giving credit to those ideas by using appropriate attribution.

Flexibility

– the ability to adapt to situations, expectations, or demands.

Flexibility is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- approach writing assignments in multiple ways, depending on the task and the writer’s purpose and audience;
- recognize that conventions (such as formal and informal rules of content, organization, style, evidence, citation, mechanics, usage, register, and dialect) are dependent on discipline and context; and
- reflect on the choices they make in light of context, purpose, and audience.

Metacognition

– the ability to reflect on one’s own thinking as well as on the individual and cultural processes and systems used to structure knowledge.

Metacognition is fostered when writers are encouraged to

- examine processes they use to think and write in a variety of disciplines and contexts;
- reflect on the texts that they have produced in a variety of contexts;
- connect choices they have made in texts to audiences and purposes for which texts are intended; and
- use what they learn from reflections on one writing project to improve writing on subsequent projects.

PLAGIARISM AND ACADEMIC DISHONESTY

Plagiarism is when you use the ideas or work of another person or persons as if they were your own; by definition it is “The act of using another person’s words without giving credit to that person”(Merriam Webster Dictionary). Proper citation and sourcing, which we will learn in this class, is a necessary way to avoid plagiarism. Borrowing, copying, or pasting from any source, AI or other, is considered plagiarism. Best to use quotes when using computer generated or human sources; paraphrasing is also a smart options when one encounters difficult moments in the text. Students found plagiarizing may be dropped from the course or may be expelled from De Anza College.
